When I first started writing this I swear my intentions were well, and I'd start with maybe a memory or two, but then I saw you for the first time in a while, and awkward thoughts brought awkward smiles, and I left your room for the very last time, and I know that I can't sleep with all of these things they're running through my head, so I stayed up and I I wrote this song about you. Isn't that cliche of me to do? But it`s nothing for you The band just needed something more to play, so don't blush or hooray at the possible sound of your name 'cause no, I wouldn't go that far. No. Now I, I`ve watched these years disperse and still this verse lacks words, and I'm losing all but a memory or two 'cause now I see you and I can't hold back a smile. Your fashion's long gone out of style and there's nothing left to impress me anymore 'cause I know that I can't see that same girl that I had known so long ago, so I gave up and I I wrote this song about you. isn't that cliche of me to do? But it's nothing for you. The band just needed something more to play, so don't blush or hooray at the possible sound of your name. No, I wouldn't go that far. No, I wouldn't go that far. And you're dying to know if a thank you will show up on my back sleeve but I don't think I'll tell of who crafted this hell and fixed it on me to the world. I wrote this song. I wrote it about you. I wrote this song all about you. Yeah, the band just needed one more song to play. Yeah, the band just needed one more song to play. Yeah. I wrote this song about you. Isn't that cliche of me to do? But it's nothing for you. The band just needed something more to play, so don't blush or hooray at the possible sound of your name 'cause no I wouldn't go that far. No, I wouldn't go that far. No, I wouldn't go that far.