

Lonely Hours

Mallory Knox

Oh sweet love what have we done?
We've broken down again where all the streets are over run with lies that never end
They'll tie us down & lift us up for everyone to see Revealing all our darkest truths we've tried so hard to keep

When all the lights are out we'll have to face this world alone
With no one there to hold our hand our bodies turn to stone
There's monsters deep inside of us they're killing us to breathe
And watch them take a hold of us & kill us while we sleep
While we sleep

They may break my heart this time but my body will survive

Oh sweet lover can you see me washing away all our sins?
In our darkest lonely hours we learn to forget & forgive
I will love you again & again

Oh darling make your way to me they're breaking through the door
I need your help to stand again I'm broken on the floor
My hands are tied my knees are weak from crawling in the dirt
Without your arms supporting me they'll see me at my worst
At my worst

They may break my heart this time but my body will survive
Oh sweet lover can you see me washing away all our sins
In our darkest lonely hours we learn to forget & forgive
If we never ever come home (if we never ever come home)
If we never ever come home (if we never ever come home)
I will love you again & again

If you stand with me I won't let you fall
Building up the barriers we'll break through the walls
If you stand with me I won't let you fall
We're building up the barriers we'll break through walls
Oh if you stand with me I won't let you fall
We're building up the barriers to break through the walls
Oh if you stand with me I won't let you fall
We're building up the barriers to break through the walls

If you break my heart this time then my body will survive

Oh sweet lover can you see me washing away all our sins
In our darkest lonely hours we learn to forget & forgive
If we never ever come home (if we never ever come home)
If we never ever come home (if we never ever come home)
I will love you again & again
I will love you again & again
