

Resuscitate

Mallory Knox

Blue lights, the flashing in my eyesight sends chills down my spine, when they shine outside
And if I, if I could find the words to save your skin tonight
And open your eyes

If all the power of my smiles that you have graced upon my face
would stand in time for you
Then it will pull you through

Stop bleeding, Start breathing tonight
And now you cower in the corner like a frightened dog
Cower in the corner like a frightened dog

Now I'm waiting in the hallway looking for a sign (For a tiny little glimmer at a chance of life)
And all the while I maybe picturing another place (But the landscape doesn't look the same without your face here
)
And I'll pray out, pray that in the end you'll be alright tonight
And open your eyes

would stand in time for you
Then it will pull you through

Stop bleeding, Start breathing tonight
And now you cower in the corner like a frightened dog
Cower in the corner like a frightened dog

I'm waiting for you, I'm waiting

Stop bleeding, Start breathing tonight
And now you cower in the corner like a frightened dog
Cower in the corner like a frightened dog
