The Misty Coast Of Albany

Marc Bolan

Weeping willow woman
Ladled on the arm
Of the misty coast of Albany
With it's charm
Pining pillar of the wild willows end
Womanly waiting
For your manly friend.

A star 'bove the mire is her husbandly choice Locked in his tower By the enchanted voice Of the Starguard Rhina With his lips soiled with gold He dares to loiter Near our lady bold.

Once a heart was made and cast In molten love But t'was in realms of the past.