I was driving down Ninth Avenue
As the sky was getting dark
Didn't have nothin' else to do
So I kept on riding to Battery Park

I stepped out in the damp and misty night As the fog was rolling in Man said, ?Last boat leaving tonight Is the boat for Ellis Island?

As my feet touch solid ground
I felt a chill run down my spine
I could almost hear the sound
Of thousands pushing through the lines

Mothers and bewildered wives
That sailed across the raging sea
Others running for their lives
To the land of opportunity
Down on Ellis Island

?What is this strange paradise??
They must've wondered through their cries and moans
After all they've sacrificed
Their faith, their families, friends and homes

Then on the separation stairs
They were counted out or counted in Frozen while the inspectors stared
Down on Ellis Island
Down on Ellis Island

Me, I only stumbled in Just to wander around that empty hall Where someone else?s fate had been Decided in no time at all

And cases filled with hats and clothes And the belongings of those who journeyed far Their strange reminders, I suppose Of where we?re from and who we are

But as the boat pulled off the shore I could see the fog was lifting And lights I'd never seen before Were shining down on Ellis Island Shining down on Ellis Island
