The Change

Marie Fredriksson

Suddenly the change was here Cold as ice and full of fear There was nothing I could do I saw slow motion pictures of me and you

Far away I heard you cry My table roses slowly died Suddenly the change was here I took your hand, you dried my tears

The night turned into black and blue Still we wondered why me and you After all we're still here I held your hand, I felt no fear

Memories will fade away Sun will shine on a new clear day New red roses in my hand Maybe someday we will understand

Maybe someday we will understand