

The Minute

Marion Raven

Oh there you were and I was not prepared I wish it was a better time Oh there you were with your forbidden stare and you could not be mine

When our eyes meet, the more I want you near The more I know I will resign I never looked, but now I found you here my feet and hands you bind

And in the minute you let go well, that's the minute you will know and you'll find you're nothing like before You rather die, then let it go
You rather die, then let it go
You rather die, you'll never let it go and you will never be the same again

So here we are and there's no turning back I wouldn't do it if I could So here we are remind me why it's wrong
Because it feels so good

When our eyes meet, the more I feel alive the more I know I wanna be The only one who wakes up by your side the only one you see

and you will never be the same again...