The Lonely People

Every man wants to rewrite what's true But you take what you've got cuz its all you can do I could go on with the things that I can't stand But you've got your own problems, man

It's the same old song and the same old place A broken mirror the same old face You lonely people, I'm just getting through life like you

A cigarette or a bottle of booze for two Tell a tale if it eases the pain for you I could go on with defending where I stand Two can play no one wins so there's nothing to gain

It's the same old song and the same old place A broken mirror the same old face You lonely people, I'm just getting through life like you

It's been a long time since I heard them say your name Things are different. I don't live the same. You probably found a new distraction in your life
