

Starless Summer Sky

Marshall Crenshaw

The heat of the day begins to die
The faintest breeze comes drifting by
And you and I we watch the clouds roll by
All alone beneath the starless summer sky

Each night we talk about the day
When we run out of things to say
We sit and gaze into each other's eyes
So alone beneath the starless summer sky

Sometimes the best words are left unspoken
Sometimes the best words are left unsaid
Sometimes it's nobody else's business
Well together, tonight, you know that it's right

We sit and gaze into each other's eyes
And we kiss beneath the starless summer skies
Sometimes the best words are left unspoken
Sometimes the best words are left unsaid
Sometimes it's nobody else's business

Well together, tonight, you know that it's right
The heat of the day begins to die
The faintest breeze comes drifting by

And you and I we watch the clouds roll by
All alone beneath the starless summer sky
'neath the starless summer sky...