

Satrapold

Master's Hammer

I do not wish to worry much your hearing, gentlemen, when it is necessary to have a drink and pay off the debt to one's thirst.
But allow me only to say what now rests in my heart before into the castle chambers I shall look with you goodselves:
Now, I am your captain and my office is that i give my word to laws where the crime throws its shadow.
After my father being von Satrapold Also they know me at Court the society there pay homage to me, which I admit with eagerness !
What an exquisite decoration of the walls by Belgian velvet !
But the vessel is up to its brim
- we shall sweep fast away that rabble ! and I wish to tell this freely that we will get ready a trick for the Devil, who then will whine in his cell !
