

One Heart

Mat Kearney

She said I don't know if I've ever really
Have ever really trusted anybody
And ain't nobody ever really know me except the ghosts that come each night to haunt me
When there's so much that I still can't remember
So many memories I can't surrender
The kind of cold that comes under your sweater cuts to the bone like you're alone forever

Like a stolen car tonight
On a road with broken lines
Running all the changing lights
To hide what's fallen from your eyes

There's got to be more than just this flesh and bone
Tell me I'm more than just the scars I've known
If all that we love is all we ever own
We're more than one, more than one heart beating alone

More than one heart beating alone

Last night I felt like I was going crazy
I kept on hearing all those words replaying
Sometimes it feels like nothing is ever changing
Stuck like Groundhog Day in the wars were waging
And when it hurts so bad that you wanted to die
Maybe we crash into each other to feel alive
When the ones you love are the ones that always say goodbye
The things you hate you do for no good reason why

Like a stolen car tonight
On a road with broken lines
Running all the changing lights
To hide what's fallen from your eyes

There's got to be more than just this flesh and bone
Tell me I'm more than just the scars I've known
If all that we love is all we ever own
We're more than one, more than one heart beating alone

More than one heart beating alone
More than one heart beating alone

Give me one reason, one to believe in Tell me there's something left to believe in
To the rhythm of one heart, to the rhythm of one heart
And I'm still chasing cracks in the pavement
Looking for the ghosts that left me waiting
To the rhythm of one heart, the rhythm of one heart beating alone

More than one heart beating alone
More than one heart beating alone
