Summer Days In Bloom

Maximilian Hecker

Paralyzed by ancient delight
And riding for a fall today
I am dressed in style, so eager in mind
But furthermore distracted by you

And it's like I lose myself in dreaming of summer days in bloom
Oh, I've got no clue how I could fight that all that I am is worth a dime

Worth a dime

This liquid lunch will not stop my punch— Drunk quality to doze while I run It is thirty—nine degrees in my mind It's thirty thousand miles more to go

Cause it's like I lose myself in dreaming of summer days in bloom

For I've got no clue whatever happened All that I am is worth a dime
Worth a dime
