Clothes, videos, toys, cheeseburgers, cars, a functioning economy.

You can still have a functioning economy and preserve open spaces with a little planning. Yeah.

Socialism. Complete disaster.

Theodore Roosevelt was a socialist? And Yeats? Theodore Roosevelt...

Henry David Thoreau, Robinson Jeffers, the National Geographic Society, all socialists?

You're talking about socialism. No, I'm not. I'm talking about not covering every square inch of populated America with houses and strip malls until you can't even remember what happens when you stand in a meadow at dusk.

What happens in the meadow at dusk?
