Truth of the Heart

Melissa Etheridge

I hear your questions I see your face Your life before you Is full of grace What can I tell you To let you know Your angel's eyes Will watch you grow

Come listen close And I'll try to let you know It's all I know

There is no magic There are no secrets We all begin this race at the start But I have come this far With a truth of the heart

Deep down inside I think we're all the same Try not to judge someone And never shame I do believe that people are good They just want hope and respect And to be understood

Sometimes it hard sometimes it's strange But the truth of the heart is people can change

Yes there is danger and there are shadows And there is fear inside the dark It has powered countries and borne religion Fear can never rule the heart

My father's burden My mother's rain My own desire My sister's pain All souls have traveled along this road Each one has carried their own heavy load
