

Revenge of Tizona

Metalium

Vivar, Burgos, ano one thousand forty three brought up with truth soon to stand for honour and glory

ride on,
fearless through the rain and storm loyalty and believe in Aragon

I am here,
revenge of Tizona
feel the fear
my vengeance will go far betrayed by Fernando no longer protects crown and throne but legions behind him still follow the leader they know

dead man
riding through the rain and storm battle won
as Barbieca takes you home

I am here,
revenge of Tizona
feel the Fear
my vengeance will go far

I am here,
revenge of Tizona
feel the Fear
my vengeance will go far

"El Cid Campeador" (born as Rodrigo Diaz de Vivar, 1043) was one of the most successful conqueror in Spain, fighting for king Fernando with his sword called "Tizona". When he died in a battle, his legions strapped his dead body on his horse "Barbieca" and let it ride into the battlefield the day after his death. The enemies escaped in pure panic as they believed they saw the living dead ride again.