

Holding Back the Fire

Michael Schulte

Come on and open this door i know that you're craving for more so why'd you think you and your heart will just fall apart, but open and restore belonging is burning a hole i can hear the call in your soul and it's calling cause out of sight is not out of mind and friends are still the light, somewhere deep inside you make the days feel so cold and so lonely though the sun's rised and arrived in your heart you're holding back the fire you're holding by yourself you're holding back your life while you're drowning, drowning you need to get rid of the fears stop doubt to limber's into tears cause there's no reason to crawl just stay on the ground so raise and face the fears get up and take these steps

you make the days feel so cold and so lonely
though the sun's rised and arrived in your heart
you're holding back the fire
you're holding by yourself
you're holding back your life
while you're drowning, drowning

it's not that you don't know what to do it's not that your heart feels lost or slow
it's not that you don't know what to do
it's not that your heart feels lost or slow

you make the days feel so cold and so lonely
though the sun's rised and arrived in your heart
you're holding back the fire
you're holding by yourself
you're holding back your life
while you're drowning, drowning