Restless Heart

Michael W. Smith

On the street it never changes There's a chill in the air Icy people, empty faces Not a word, not a soul who cares Do you give up Have you given in to the lie that a heart never changes Don't be fooled by what you see there Another man with another case of

One restless heart Who never could find love Too many hurts To reach out again How can he know Love still wants to find him One restless shell of a man

Don't look away In a moment his life could be new Just a moment and love could break through Oh finally some place to start For a man with a restless heart

Why the fear then, why the worry Why the walls holding love inside When you're needed in the fury In the fighting to save men's lives Don't you give up Don't be giving in to the lie that a heart never changes If you reach out God'll reach in Bring an end to another case of

One restless heart Who never could find love Too many hurts To reach out again How can he know Love still wants to find him One restless shell of a man

One restless heart, one restless heart One restless heart, one restless heart He's got to know that love still can find him Love can reach any man

Don't look away In a moment his life could be new Just a moment and love could break through Oh finally some place to start For a man with a restless heart

Don't you look away Oh never a stranger again Love has saved a restless man Finally some place to start For a man with a restless heart Don't you look away Oh never a stranger again Love has saved a restless man Finally some place to start For a man with a restless heart
