

Should Have Known Better

Ministry

so many years I just suffered through the tears knowing one day i'd wake up wishing I had never met her but as the time goes by my hope keeping playing every day as I laugh to myself, 'i just should have known better' there's no more laughter as I think about the other girl it's a slap in my face as i'm opening her letter she's doing fine now with two kids and another man as I cry out loud, 'i just should have known better' she was the reason I was living every day I would ride upon a white horse in my quest to try and find her but now it's too late, I don't care if I die tonight cos a voice keeps ringing in my heart, "i should have known better"

I learned my lesson this time loneliness and a broken heart should've known right from the start
