Labyrinthian

Misery Signals

Drag my face through the dirt again I know I'm where I belong For you're a constant reminder Of all the rights that I've wronged

Give me the strength to move this mountain To block this line of sight This was more than I could ask for Tear down the sky Black out the sky Sever these ties

As you further your tragedy To prove to me you're alive Sooner or later we'll have to choose From this, a new set of lies

Give me the strength to flood this valley To wash my hands of you

This was more than I could ask for Tear down the sky Black out the sky Sever these ties

So here I stand This battered path laid out before me And no one said this would be easy But it's something I must do for myself It's going to be a long hard road

Know I will let go This time it feels so right to forget

This was more than I could ask for Tear down the sky Black out the sky Sever these ties

So here I stand This battered path laid out before me And no one said this would be easy But it's something I must do for myself It's going to be a long hard road Which I will walk alone