

you say that I don't understand that it's how I survive now there's nothing that can touch you I pretend that I really care when I just shrug it all away I know that it's wrong, but it keeps me breathing staring at the sun-watching so tall I went blind and saw nothing at all I wish that I could fly away, walk on air really see things as they are to show you everything- to learn from you to rise and fall in my own time Staring at the sun-watching so tall
but if I could, I'd fly you to the moon and if I could, I'd chase away your gloom until you shone like a thousand suns, so bright that when it was over, you'd laugh and pretend I was never even there.

lock up and run away, I won't betray you lost on a rainy day in the sun.....
