Cracking New Ground

My Sister's Machine

God please why was I born to this world Was it something I did? Should I do something to repent an old sin That keeps coming around, I'm not cracking new ground My mind is simply swimming in this It's high time for walking away Me I try to keep me to myself I take it day by day But I keep on thinking of everything I let get in my way, I'm not cracking new ground I keep thinking of ways to undo Whatever it was I did But I keep on falling over a past That keeps coming around, I'm not cracking new ground My mind is simply swimming in this It's high time for walking away God please why was I born to this world Was it something I did? Should I do something to repent an old sin That keeps coming around, I'm not cracking new ground My mind is simply swimming in this It's high time for walking away