Only The Young

Nancy Wilson

Only the young feel that love is a dream From which they'll never waken Their world is an apple on a tree Just waiting to be shaken And only the young don't care What tomorrow may bring Today is a merry-go-round With a big brass spring We both can't stay young as a morning in May A warm and sunny green time I'll hold you and love you every day There'll be no in-between time Though years may go by We'll look at each other and see The love lighted faces of only the young Like you and me
