

Never Known

Nitzer Ebb

Stop in front of that pain, releasing your brain
She said be someone else for a change
Walk in front of that truck, you don't trust your luck
She said be someone else for a change

She said
She said

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

Cut deep into your wrist, it's hard to resist
She said be someone else for a change
Shut your eyes to the pain and hope it remains
She said be someone else for a change

Be someone else
Be someone else for a change

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
Anything

I've read too many books
I took too many looks and I'm sorry
Showed you too much affection
Shielded your rejection, I'm sorry

I came two thousand miles
For just one of your smiles, I'm so sorry
I came two thousand miles
For just one of your smiles, I am sorry

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

Stop in front of that pain, releasing your brain
She said be someone else for a change

Walk in front that truck, you don't trust your luck
She said be someone else for a change

She said
She said

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything
I've never known, I've never known
I've never known anything

Anything, anything
Anything, anything
