Never Coming Back

Mom and dad won't you listen to me Listen to me 'cause what I'm thinkin' is Cool the quiet little look in your eye The bigger surprise is I'm doing fine here

While I zip my jacket up when it rains I brush my teeth like two times a day And though it seems so stupid to say I'm really okay, I'm workin' hard on everything, yeah

I can't let you come in It's just too confusing I can't let you come in It's just too confusing Either you tell the truth and leave here Or I am never coming back

Yeah, when there's something simple to say You shrug it away, I watch you shrug it away Cool the quiet little look in your eye The bigger surprise is I'm doing fine

While I zip my jacket up when it rains I brush my teeth like two times a day And when it all falls down on my head And I'm down on my head, I'm belly laughing again

I can't let you come in It's just too confusing I can't let you come in It's just too confusing And again you tell the truth and leave here Or I am never coming back

No, well, I don't care what you might think You just don't mean that much to me well, I'm awake, the night is loud and mom is quickly running out But I don't care what you might think You just don't mean that much to me You just don't mean that much to me, no

Cool the quiet little look in your eye Do you remember much that day When mother was gone but mother was her name? Mother was her name

I can't let you come in It's just too confusing I can't let you come in It's just too confusing Either you tell the truth and leave here Or I am never coming back

Never, never I can't let you come in Never coming back I can't let you come in I am never coming back I can't let you come in Or I am never coming back I can't let you come in Never coming back I can't let you come in Never coming back
