

Tipping The Scales

No Innocent Victim

Ever since the day you were we born you've been tipping the scales

On your own you try to pull them back, you always fail

Incrimination set by adding weight you can't undo

Your few good deeds will not compare to what you've stacked against you

Tipping the scales with your insolence

Tipping the scales with your greed

Tipping the scales with a wicked heart

That only leads to self destruction

All evil starts inside the heart before others can see

You're weighing down the scales whether or not

Those thoughts come to be

Even if you had the chance to have the scales set even again

You would weigh it all down in just one day from your thoughts within

Tipping the scales with your insolence

Tipping the scales with your greed

Tipping the scales with a wicked heart

That can only be changed if someone takes your blame

A sacrifice

If someone takes your blame

A sacrifice

Someone took your blame

A sacrifice