

The Anger Song

Nosound

The rain wakes me up
With it's noise through the wall
No warmth inside and outside the bleached fog
I still hear the tails of your words from last night
I fear that something is lying down behind...

I miss so much the sunsets at home
The long walks on the seashore

The lights the shadows the tears and pain
Misunderstanding what became insane
The voices the fears the eyes and strain
Give in to anger and make ourselves unchained

A distant shout woke up a smile on your face
You bit your lips and your eyes changed
Scared by another ride on your merry go round
Another tide to discover what is the next bound...

I miss so much the sunsets at home
The long walks on the seashore

The lights the shadows the tears and pain
Misunderstanding what became insane
The voices the fears the eyes and strain
Give in to anger and make ourselves unchained