Death Walks with Me

Noumena

The night falls and buries the dreams Age anew didn't wane Howling wind from the distance Veils death underneath Sea of lies burned to skin and truth written in sand

Scream for me, humanity, nothing you know Dead and buried, nothing you learn

Walk away and nothing you'll win Light the torch and you'll burn Joys are woven from sorrows As your days grow short Goodbye autumn breeze Death walks with me

In this chapter of hate The howling wind forges the man anew They imitate life They die as the autumn begins to fall

In this chapter of hate The night enshrines the dreams We're walking now hand in hand We storm to the stars and create the burning scars

Everything ends, mankind's last breath Never again, again and again, nothing we learn Hope was lost, mankind wiped away Never again, again and again, nothing we learn
