

A race between two hearts

Olympos Mons

Too many nights they've been waiting for the sun to shine through too many nights they've been hoping for their dreams to come true

He almost lost his way again the blood is running hot inside his veins seems that no matter what he tries she'll remain a part of the skies an endless race between two hearts will they unite, did they ever part touched by the heat of the flame he's trying and trying again once he climbed a mountain so high and he's been through the darkness down below he almost once touched the sky he's always been ready to push and shove dreaming,

feeling her heart calling out for him
every day and night

she's been waiting forever
she's now ready to fly over clouds and rainbows into the morning light
he's been trying to catch her he's been ready to die
chasing dreams and shadows straight through the darkest night the flickering starlight of the skies is nothing compared to her big dark eyes dancing like a fairy queen to the music of a pipe unseen

dreaming,
feeling her heart calling out for him
every day and night

she's been waiting forever
she's now ready to fly
over clouds and rainbows
into the morning light
he's been trying to catch her
he's been ready to die
chasing dreams and shadows
straight through the darkest night