Do you see clearly The image on the wall Is true that man Must surely fall

If we build foundations Reflections in our eyes Unless we look deep within It's believing only lies

Shadows cast in likeness Stretching with the Sun Like the fear of death They linger even though we run

Once before we lived in Another space and time Now that the Earth is our home we need a reason for the Rhyme

Don't separate yourself from your dreams Do what you must to survive Don't give up and don't give in You must keep your dream alive Do what you must to survive

The consequence is clear Regret will break your heart If you stop reaching for The top you'll be torn apart

Nothing worthwhile is easy
The path isn't always clear
With each forward step
We take we bring
The meaning ever near

Fear plagues each moment Conviction will decide If energy is gained or lost Nothing more can it provide

Against the odds we struggle
Each in his own way
But you are the one
That faces reflections of everyday
