

Living Dolls

ONE OK ROCK

Are we living in the same world? Neither you or I have the answers but There was definitely someone who decided that we would have this fated meeting

If I could touch your heart I'd be able to know how you feel I think that I'd know you'd been made; manufactured All those nameless people, all those people except me They all look the same, as if they're dolls

I felt as if I could truly see what reality was when I started to love You were the one who showed me what it meant to live - just by being by my side, just by squeezing my hand back

I was a sceptic living in this tarnished world But why is it that at the shadows in my heart were lifted By the answers you gave me The first love you gave me?

Even if the sun rises, your eyes are still going to stay closed I've cried my last tears in this world You were no puppet; you were mine and mine alone This warmth that we had - it can't be seen

If I could touch your heart I'd be able to know how you feel I think that I'd know you'd been made; manufactured All those nameless people, all those people except me They all look the same, as if they're dolls

I was a sceptic living in this tarnished world But why is it that at the stars still shine, even in this threatening sky It must have been because of the answers you gave me Must have been because of the first love you gave me
