

Connect The Dots

Over It

A purple sunrise starts this long day
We must be on our way to some place new
On our way to some place we'd never thought we'd stand
It's easy to sit back in this place and close my eyes to see your face
But sometimes blurry, that was last spring
And now the leaves we shared fall down
It's been 6 months since we were last along
I hope someday you write and say I wish this wasn't so
Because I swear we said that we would never let this go
And now we're all alone
Guess I'll have to spend these days all alone
But I'm not ready to let you go
Just don't have the strength to let you go
I just don't want to look back and say
That all I needed now was right in front of me
