

Technicolour

Paloma Faith

Once upon a time, my friends it feels like yesterday
I was living lonesome in a world of disarray
Everything was a black and white, there wasn't even gray
And every morning waking up on groundhog day

It was all in monochrome without the lies
Just like a silver screen you walk into my life
You taught the stars to light up what we find
I come alive saturated in your charms

We kiss the sky and dancing towards rainbows
Now it's all in technicolor with you

I lived in the blackest house with seven pure white cats
The bleak eyed look of every day hidden deep inside my heart
The notes on the piano now remind me of my past
And now you're here right by my side I hope that we will last

It was all in monochrome without the lies
Just like a silver screen you walk into my life
You taught the stars to light up what we find
I come alive saturated in your charms

Yellow, orange, pink, red, and blue
Let's paint the town, darling us two

You bring your pallet and I will sing the sub bar
We are just two birds of a feather

It was all in monochrome without the lies
Just like a silver screen you walk into my life
You taught the stars to light up what we find
I come alive saturated in your charms