

A Summit Borderline

Parabelle

Last night I felt I had some peace of mind
But then my day shattered when I lost that piece of mind.
I feel a breeze run through your hair
And leave this world
Without a care

Cause I know I don't need your opinion
To tell me I'm alright.
I don't need your approval
To get me through the night

Go with me. I'm still asleep
And the past I find
Will leave you with notions of peace.
Everyone can.

Last night I fell and I dropped that peace of mind
But then my life shattered when you took my piece of mind.
I feel your dreams float in to air.
Just rid this world of all its care

Cause I know I don't need admiration
To make me feel alright.
I don't need affirmation
To get me through the night.

Go with me. I'm still asleep
And the past I find
Will leave you with notions of peace.

Just go with me, I know you're weak.
In the past I lie and it's what's just out of reach.

Just run. Passed out, I remember.
Just run, you won't soon forget.

Go with me, I know you're tired of playing
For all things wrong. Have you been waiting long?
I know when this life is over I will have all I need.
All the things just past my reach.
(Run so far.)

Come inside cause you're never gonna find the wreckage.
Once inside, you will find that you're buried alive.
Common sense never left you with so much baggage.
You will find a summit borderline.
