

In sight of close calls seat the plaster off the wall claustrophobic area waking up to nothing remember one name catch the corner of the page close the book and never look back again crawl out from the walls break your fall redesign the shadows underneath it all we stay calm and overprotective last night I was up again till three watching tv and using both hands draw a breath as best you can catch the ring before it slips out of reach remember anything he'd wine split to shards cut the corners off the project and let me sleep