Blackbird Through The Dark

Patrick Park

I see you on the avenue Where you know them and they know you Down so low there's nowhere left to fall And I watch you bend like twigs against the changing of the tim es And whither under weight that weighs upon us all Just hoping that someone will hear your call

Aww... red dirt and sand may cover all the land And everything may fall apart But as soon as you know You'll be steady as you go on Like a blackbird through the dark

I see your faith begin to sway As promise seems to slip away And all the days just break to test your will And as the sun goes down on the west And we all learn to live with less Desire burns a hole you'll never fill And it's hand like a stain is on you still

Ah but red dirt and sand may cover all the land And everything may fall apart But as soon as you know You'll be steady as you go on Like a blackbird through the dark
