If You Go

(If you should go, if you should leave him alone There'll be no spring or birds to sing There'd be no sun to shine on him)

If you go, if you love me no more If I know that you want me no more Then the sun would lose its light And day turn into night Night without stars Deep night without stars

If you go, if you leave me alone If I know you're no longer my own Winter would replace the spring The birds no more would sing This cannot be, stay here with me My heart would die I know If you should go

Winter would replace the spring The birds no more would sing This cannot be, oh, stay here with me My heart would die I know If you should go
