

Party's Over

Penetration

Henrietta, why are you calling
The last dance is over
The guests have all gone
You drank your champagne
And the roses are dead now
Henrietta, why must you live on?

You're alone now.

And laughter it echoes
Through sparkling hallways
The ladies are waiting in velvet and bows
So strike up the music
We'll dance until daylight
The ghosts never sleep
As the dust settles down.

You're alone now.

Together, forever
as silence awakes you
You're watching the figures go round and round, round and round
Voices are whispering - "party's over"
So Henrietta why must you live on?

You're alone now.