From within

Persephone

I see my world collapse While my truths collide Confusion won my inspiration My times alone I won't forget Yet fear of loss makes me regret My soul, it lays broken But I just can't pretend It won't show on the surface Sure you'll understand

My true inspiration And realisation Your contamination My incarnation Can't hide the lie And those tears I cry I yearned for truth Eventually...

Losing my faith only took me a second Finding my illusions, impenetrable Presume I'd seduce you With my loneliness My soul, it lays broken But I just can't pretend It won't show on the surface Sure you'll understand

"All my impressions that I faced and the answers I sought. The illusions that I chased and the pain it caused, Slumbered by violet skies and the bloodred seas Through unreal forests and abandoned outlands. Regardless of what I learned, despite of what I feel. None of it all solves my loss."