Secret Garden

Persephone

Once there was a garden, in a land so far away Many ages passed, its beauty faded with the days A garden long forgotten, all birds flew with the wind Only silence left

Once there was a secret, where wild flowers grew They knew many strangers, heard stories of transient fates A secret revealed, they sheltered over years A mystery unsolved

Once there was a person, guided by a strange, odd sway Her clothes were torn, her skin was scratched by thorns This person had a wistful heart, fighting through the thicket Desires got stronger

Once there was beauty, a flower never seen before In among the weeds, blossoms shimmered like a rainbow Her beauty oh so stunning, the sun was shining just for her A human-being blinded

Once there was hope, in a land so far away The person only had one wish, wanted to absorb her light Once there was hope, but the human touched her without thought She died in my arms
