

Shared Bodies

Pianos Become the Teeth

So striking, I swear you leveled me with a look, reminded me of my breathing patterns, ran your hands through the grease and set fire to my face, seduced a love to grief and left the same as you came,
we were based on an end, It's as if everyone always arrives already gone, some say love is a river and the wetness behind my ears puts out the wick, some say love is time, I helped you pass, love is location, we were just circumstance, could almost smell the must, the urgency I knew better, I just didn't care, but I think that I felt more inside you than I would have liked
,
you carved me rigid, and I hate you for it you were everything I wanted at night, you were a dream, but come light, I lost what I saw in you, through those somber windows, we were addicted to the moon light lines in my old room, and I couldn't tell us apart.