

mud
seeping up through her toes coloring all of the roses gray she doesn't care
she likes it in her hair
two parts of water
three parts of ocean sand she mixes them with her ivory hand, saying
"let it rain on
let the world keep on drowning"

she she's the queen of the dirt
and all the water
she
and all the water

gray
stain on her eyelids and lips wending along her tipsy way hitches her gown
but she just sinks down and down battering raindrops driving her into the ground looks for her legs but they can't be found harder she laughs
as the world keeps on drowning

she
she's the queen of the dirt
and all the water
