

Let Me Go

Prime Circle

Look around, I'm surrounded by people
Wondering where I went wrong,
Hearing voices telling me boy you're just not that strong.
I'm entwined in a web of confusion,
counting dreams to one day carve in stone.
It's these vines that I have broken, falling to the ground.

So let me go and let me see and let me find myself again.
And all these walls, I tear them down and I move on.
So let me go and let me see and let me find out finally,
And I pray no more vines entwine me, no more vines.

Staring deep inside this mirror,
Trying to figure out whose staring back.
A guess that I haven't decided where my heart is at.
Strange emotions, they posses me,
And they pull my hands, my feet and my soul,
To a place I never thought of but I'm glad to go.

So let me go, let me see and let me find myself again.
And all these walls I tear them down and I move on.
So let me go and let me see and let me find out finally,
And I pray no move vines entwine me, entwine me.

So count me in, I'll stand up right,
I'll wait my turn but I will fight.
And at this stage, I'm paranoid, about these choices, I've destroyed.
So let me go and let me be from all this torment, all these games.
And now's my turn, I'll stand my ground

So let me go and let me see and let me find myself again.
And all these walls, all these walls, I'll tear them down.
So let me go and let me see and let me find out finally.
I swear that I'm already on my way.
Cause I'm afraid, I'm a fool now, again!!

Let me go, let me go, go, go, go!
