

Fading Out

Primitive Radio Gods

A car moves slowly down the street of a residential neighborhood

The conversations at it's peak but the static's getting round and round

You're fading out, can't hear what you say, you're fading out, out, out, out

The car pulls over to the curb, a curtain moves behind a window

You're now completely out of range, in the dark where all the voices go

You're fading out, can't hear what you say, you're fading out, out, out, out

You're fading out, can't hear what you say, you're fading out, out, out, out

What did you say? What did you say?

What did you say? What did you say? What did you say?

On a highway outside town, another stranger keeps you company

You're fading out, you're fading out, what did you say?

The batteries are running down, I'm gonna lose you to the atmosphere

You're fading out, what did you say? You're fading out

What did you say? What did you say? What did you say?

You're fading out, can't hear what you say, you're fading out, out, out, out
