When I woke up this mornin' I felt a pang. I was hungerin' for some apple pie. Stumble in the bathroom, hung my hog a little bit. Washed the sleep out of my eye. Oh yeah, it's gonna be a fine day. Scratched myself a bit. Poured me out a bowl-a corn chex. Closest thing I could find to apple pie. Lingerin' taste of toothpaste Made the milk go down a bit funny. But you know, them chex they do satisfy. Oh yeah, this'll be a fine day. So, after my mornin' rise-n-shine and eat-n-clean. Had my mind set to hit them streets. Drizzle from the night left cold puddles out. Had my black stomp-boots on my feet. It's my day.

Since I was in kneepants my pop had tried to make me realize. If I set my mind down to it I could be a big man in the public eye.

So with my big blue collar on, I set out to find the easy way. What an ice cold bath it was when I found you had to pay to pla  $y \cdot$

To taste the taste it's a tease that never would subside.

The taste is strong but soured by my learned eyes.

Well, if a woodchuck could chuck wood, he'd get down on his kne es to pray.

This little snappy boy might see the light this ground hog's day.