Whaling Stories

Procol Harum

Pailing well after sixteen days, a mammoth task was set Sack the town, and rob the tower, and steal the alphabet Close the door and bar the gate, but keep the windows clean God's alive inside a movie! watch the silver screen!

Rum was served to all the traitors; pygmies held themselves in check Bloodhounds nosed around the houses, down dark alleys sailors c rept Six bells struck, the pot was boiling - soup spilled out on pas sers-by Angels mumbled incantations, closely watched by God on high Lightning struck out - fire and brimstone! boiling oil and shri eking steam! Darkness struck with molten fury, flashbulbs glorified the scen e

Not a man who had a finger, not a man who could be seen Nothing called (not name nor number) - echo stormed it's final scream

Daybreak washed with sands of gladness, rotting all it rotted c lean Windows peeped out on their neighbors, inside fireside bedsides gleam Shalimar, the trumpets chorused, angels wholly all shall take Those alive will meet the prophets, those at peace shall see th eir wake
