

Letters Home - Aftermath

Radical Face

Well, the men arrived as the sun began to set
And they pulled a wooden crate 'bout six feet long
I could read the news in their downcast eyes
My boy had passed away
So I stepped inside
'Cause there was nothin' left to say