

Only Bridge

Ray Price

You've always put a torch to each and every bridge you've crossed
With each and everyone a little more was lost
I hope you take enough memories to keep you when you're gone
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on

You might be by yourself out there till God knows when
For you, I know there'll be no crossing back again
If you ever learn, by then you'll already be alone
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on

There's a golden rule but somehow you failed to learn it
You find a bridge to cross and then you burnt it
The saddest part is that you were only doing yourself wrong
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on

The saddest part is that you were only doing yourself wrong
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on
The only bridge you haven't burned is the one you're standing on