

Running

Rebelution

Tell me what you're running from, she said everything and every one

Tell me what you're running from, what you're running from

Tell me what you're running from because your past it can't be undone

Oh tell me what you're running from, what you're running from

She wakes up every morning, thoughts weighing heavy on her mind

She's hoping today will be a better day than the ones behind

She's having some trouble getting going, from the fear she's paralyzed

She puts her face into her hands and then she cries

She's so tired, she closes her eyes trying to live up to a standard that the world provides

She's so tired, she closes her eyes trying to live up to a standard that the world provides

No hope for tomorrow, no hope for today

No hope for anything that comes her way

She's so used to feeling empty inside

No reasons to live, more reasons to die

At least that's what she feels inside

Will she ever find the courage to change

She's been running away so long, running away from home

Will she ever get back, I don't know, no I don't know

You can see it in her eyes and you can see it in her smile