Hadalpelagic Worms

Reciprocal

Thriving vigorously from forbidden depths Lie invertebrate in malevolent cogitation Adapting from birth to inconceivable force

Black waters serve as the cradle In bottomless trenches and canyons

Hatched cells, larvae feed Eggs laid randomly Panmictic mating populates the caves The light will never penetrate Transformation in the dark Heinous brains with one vision Exterminate all useless, worthless flesh With no mercy, the infestation begins

Twelve feet long with magnificent strength Devouring foraminifera to endure being Evolving from minuscule to behemoth From the feast following the onslaught

They will rise, the proboscis To lead our demise, eversible Mouthparts of the bristle worm Grow to abnormal size Viscous lives, glutinous In darkness, forever deprived Determination to rule the earth will strain The continents to divide

Cracked eggs, larvae feed Worms are spawning rapidly Panmixia breeding dominates the sea Savage clones of hatred Their mutation of formation Grasps into the humans Entrails exploding out the ends in sporadic spurts Post-mortal spasms occur

Arising from the oceanic currents The flood begins to swell Surging species, never known to exist Begin to take control Sludging, gunking, oozing mucus sweeps Across the Surface

Worms will colonize, eunice Worms are spreading their hives, the polychaetes Worms will leave none alive, aphroditois Worms have taken our lives Everyone dies...

Devastation, alteration, cataclysmic revolution Catastrophic transformation
