

To My Senses

Richard Marx

Well, its cold here in the quiet
Drowning in the silence
Of everything I wish we used to be
So many chances wasted
And kisses left untasted
So much that still burns inside of me

I kept reaching out, only to be shut down
But now the truth is giving me away

I've been running, yeah, Ive been running
But now I'm coming to my senses

I am humble by your splendor
Awash in sweet surrender
A thousand miles beyond the road to gone
Well, I'm tired of being lonely
And you're longing to show me
All that I've been missing much too long

And like a warm and tender wind,
I'm spellbound as I breathe you in
And I know that you can see

You and I could spend forever
Making up for time together

Pull me in and don't you fight it
You and I, yeah, we're both inside it

Make my broken heart reborn
Take me over like a raging storm

Say goodbye, time to surrender
Follow me to the edge of forever